UF in North Queensland

Known as the Sunshine State, Queensland is home to lush green rainforests, golden beaches, the remote Outback, and the spectacular marine diversity of the Great Barrier Reef. This program uses the theme of sustainable development to explore the relationship between people and their natural environment. The short program is based in tropical North Queensland, where we learn from leading experts at James Cook University. We spend time in Cairns, Port Douglas, and Magnetic Island. This year we have added two extra days to the program.

This 26-day study tour includes snorkeling and/or diving on the Great Barrier Reef, hiking and bird watching in the tropical rainforest, experiencing Aboriginal culture and wildlife of the Outback, and spending two nights on an Australian family farm. Queensland has a wonderful tropical climate throughout the year.

The focus is on learning through guided action. Students spend about 60% of their time traveling the stunning national parks, forests, wildlife reserves, coastlines, and islands of Australia under the guidance of knowledgeable field professionals. The remaining time is spent in class.

Group meals will be provided at special locations, and students have the flexibility to choose amongst the many cafes and restaurants, or cook for themselves in the hostel facilities.

In-country transportation in a comfortable coach is provided. Students should be prepared to move and travel frequently while in the field, although many say that the bus trips are always enjoyable with such fantastic scenery out the window!

Application deadline is March 1, 2012.
*Applications considered on space-available basis,
